Pravin Dahal ^Well, I have left using all Microsoft products 4 years ago and still doing well without it... However, I am planning to get one soon.. it is Microsoft Natural Ergonomic Desktop Keyboard 7000... That is the only Microsoft product I like...

Vkas Parajuli @ sabi: do u think we go down without MS product.

Allen Bailochan Tuladhar I have only lived with Microsoft products and technologies for the past 25 years and hope to be doing the same for the next 25 years, Sabi. It is not only great products and technologies, but the breadth of the products in the PC, Phone, cloud, tv and other devices makes it my ideal platform.

Bibek Sharma Chapagain Vkas Parajuli and Pravin Dahal Linux computers are slow, unreliable, unpredictable, and just downright ANNOYING AS PISS. It's a huge, excruciating process to even get a picture from the internet into a "KWord" document. When you scroll down, the screen lags and then all of the sudden goes full speed down the page. The screen will also randomly fade from color to greyscale. You cannot put spaces in front of words in the "KWord" documents. It cannot perform the most simple of tasks that Windows XP can do with ease. You can say that it's better because it's free, but if it doesn't work well, there's no point in even having it. That would be like getting an old, unusable car from a junk yard and placing it in your garage because it's "free", and a functional automobile is not. So basically, if you agree, say it loud, say it PROUD: "I HATE LINUX!"

Pravin Dahal @Sabi Gaire, I see you're trying really hard to be an MSP.. selectively liking comments opposing Linux and supporting Microsoft, no matter however lame they are.. You deserve to be an MSP.. Best of luck.

Pravin Dahal ^Well, when I say "You deserve to be an MSP", I mean no offence to my ex-MSP friends and bros: Prakash Chapain, Prashant Dhewaju, Tej Dhamala, Sabin Bhandari, Abhilash Poudel.. Although you were MSPs, you guys are great...
